Educational objectives

The communication of cultural heritage is the focus of this 2nd cycle Degree Course.

The course is divided in:

- Class specific educational activities related to the disciplinary ambits of information and Communication theories and techniques, of Semiotics as well as socio-economic, historical-political and cognitive subjects;
- Differentiated related and integrative educational activities aiming at comparing communication science with other sciences (History of modern/contemporary art, Museum studies and art and restoration criticism, Performing arts, Cinema, Photography and Television, Musicology and history of music, Italian Literature, Literary criticism and Comparative Literatures, Philology, English/German/Arab/Albanian Literature, Language and translation) and at making the educational programme coherent with the needs of the labour market.

Students will have the opportunity to experiment on their own, through a 3 credits workshop, the close observation of crucial issues and methods of their future professional role; they will thus acquire, according to the educational programme and to their personal interests and competences, useful knowledge for accessing the labour market.

9 credits are awarded to elective educational activities.

Based on previous research experience both in the University of Palermo and with other national and international research agencies, and coherently with the outcomes of some experimental initiatives (PhDs in Design, European Cultural Studies, Cultural Heritage Sciences and University Master, two curricula have been envisaged: "Text cultures" and "Visual culture".

Students may choose one of them after the first year (60 credits), aiming at consolidating the theoretical knowledge from their previous studies in Communication, Languages, Literatures, Visual and performing arts.

The 2nd cycle Degree Course in "Communication of cultural heritage" aims at training professionals who, together with sound cultural grounding in areas such as the communication of cultural heritage, text and visual culture sciences and advanced competence in the humanistic field, possess the typical knowledge and skills of communication specialists and are able to ideate and coordinate high level projects in the field of cultural heritage, critical text editing and contemporary visual arts.

The specific objectives of the course will vary depending on the chosen curriculum, being respectively:

For the "Text cultures" curriculum: the achievement of a mature and aware understanding of literary studies in their (literary-critical, linguistic and philological) articulations and of their relation with modern comparative studies, with theory of literature, with the history of culture, with historical-philosophical subjects and applied computer science;

For the "Visual culture" curriculum: the achievement of a mature and aware understanding of the sciences of image, seen as an interplay among image analysis, social and individual view analysis and of the media supporting these images.

The attitude to produce multimedia projects for the analysis and communication of text cultures and visual culture will be developed in both curricula through specific laboratory practice.
