36	This course introduces the fundamentals of tourism marketing. It teaches students how marketing concepts and principles such as market segmentation, targeting and positioning, the marketing mix, and marketing planning are used to successfully market tourism products and services. 1. Lectures/Discussions will be used to present the concepts and tools that provide the basis for sound marketing plans. Each lecture will be structured around a particular component of the Hospitality Marketing Mix. All relevant tourism marketing activities will be covered during the seminar. Providing access to frameworks will prepare the ground for students to understand the core concepts they are expected to apply to a case studies and to their individual marketing plan (assignments). 2. Case Studies will provide opportunities for students to apply concepts and methods discussed in lectures to "real" marketing problems. Students are required to review and understand the case situation before class discussion, to come to class prepared, and to actively contribute to case discussion.

36	Positive Organizations are defined as workplaces with high performance and high employee engagement. They foster well-being by investing in well-being strategies for their stakeholders. Scientific publications related to productivity of fostering well-being in the workplace date back to the early 1930s. Since then, a growing body of literature has pointed out that highly engaged and happy employees are indeed more productive. The hospitality/tourism industry is involved, more than other industries, in offering happiness and wellbeing related experiences. This course focuses on developing skills that are necessary for professional and organizational satisfaction. Students will acquire new competencies by learning and applying scientifically tested models and practices for enhancing meaningful relationships, organizational commitment, and purpose in hospitality. This course will be highly interactive and active participation is expected. Course methodology is experiential with interactive videos, small group sharing, role-playing, in-class exercises, and large group discussions.
